History of the Archive and its Holdings

The Kurt Schwitters Archive was founded in 1994 as a department of the Sprengel Museum Hannover. It was occasioned by the presentation of the documentation dealing with his father's artistic oeuvre assembled by Ernst Schwitters (1918–1996). In conjunction with this file on the works, further material including several autographs, personal documents and documentary photographs already came to Hannover in 1993. In some cases, however, chance determined whether the one or other documents remained with the family in Lysaker near Oslo or were included in this convolute. All of Kurt Schwitters's works and documents located in the museum in 1998 were published in a collection catalogue (see Slg. Hannover 1998).

These holdings were expanded by means of purchases and donations: Notable among them is the acquisition of Schwitters's correspondence with Müller-Widmanns (2003), several examples of printed matter, the typography of which was designed by Schwitters, as well as the correspondence about Schwitters (for example with Käte Steinitz and other contemporaries) and other documents that entered the archive from the Schwitters experts and scholars as Klaus Stadtmüller and Heinz Vahlbruch (2001), from Werner Schmalenbach (2003), Hans-Jürgen Hereth (2009), Werner Heine (2014) and Peter Bissegger (2022).

The archive grew enormously through the loan of the Kurt and Ernst Schwitters Foundation, which was founded in Hannover in 2001. Lola Schwitters (1918–2001) gave the foundation the artistic estate of both artists belonging to the family in the state in which it could be found at the time of her husband Ernst's death in 1996. The literary oeuvre of Kurt Schwitters as well as numerous other papers were likewise donated in 2004 – all of the documents that were still in Norway or stored in other places. The foundation's convolute consequentially also encompasses the loans that Ernst Schwitters had already made to the Schwitters Archive in the Stadtbibliothek [Municipal Library] Hannover in 1985. They had previously been in Montreal for circa 10 years, where the literary scholar Friedhelm Lach worked on them. Furnished with the designation "+)", they were published in the catalogue of the holdings of the Schwitters Archive in the Stadtbibliothek (see Schwitters-Archiv 1986 and 1987) and came to the Sprengel Museum Hannover in 2008. Kurt Schwitters's music scores, which Friedhelm Lach passed on to Eric Erfurth, were likewise reunited with the foundation's holdings in 2004. Further donations of individual works and numerous documents from the estate of Kurt and Ernst Schwitters were made by Bengt Schwitters, most recently in 2023 and 2024, when his apartment in Hanover was dissolved. The legacy of the artist and writer Kurt Schwitters is thus accessible as a whole again today in the Sprengel Museum Hannover (even though they are catalogued separately according to owner).

The Ernst Schwitters holdings include the papers dealing with his activity as the trustee of his father's estate in addition to the archive documenting his own artistic work as a photographer. It encompasses over 100,000 photographs as well as the accompanying documents and publications. It is not possible in every case to draw a clear dividing line between the holdings of Kurt and Ernst Schwitters to the extent that both lived together until 1945 and that Ernst had already early ordered his father's estate. There are especially overlappings within the correspondence. Until 1948, however, Kurt Schwitters is the person of reference; the letters written by Ernst to his father are thus ordered among the latter's correspondence. In addition, the personal correspondence between Ernst and his wife Lola Schwitters from the period from 1943 to 1992 was added in 2023, as well as between Lola and her sister Fay Kleinman and her mother Gertrud Mehrgut in New York, as well as the personal family photos from Lola and Ernst's collection.

The largest part of the preserved archive holdings concerning Kurt Schwitters date from his time in exile after 1937. His wife Helma Schwitters was only able to send very little previous material remaining in Hannover to Lysaker by the time that World War II broke out in 1939. The material that had been left behind in the house on Waldhausenstraße 5 was destroyed by an incendiary bomb in October 1943. – In 2007, the foundation was able to recover a few notebooks dating from the early 1920s which obviously belong to the estate and were rescued in Hannover from a private collection. When he fled to England in April 1940, Schwitters had to leave material from the Norwegian period (1937–April 1940) behind in the house on Fagerhøyveien 22 in Lysaker. His son took custody of them when he returned to Norway in 1945. After the death of Kurt Schwitters in 1948, his documents dating from the English years (1940–1948) were given to Ernst Schwitters by Edith Thomas, his father's companion. In Norway, Ernst had already collected a part of Kurt Schwitters's post-1945 correspondence, which the latter sent to his son for his information.

Processing Status

In the context of preparing Kurt Schwitters. Catalogue Raisonné (see CR) between 1996 to 2006, the emphasis of the archival work was initially concentrated on the compilation of a documentation on Schwitters's life and work: The work file was systematically supplemented, all of the data was processed in electronic form and a comprehensive scholarly instrument was set up, encompassing a bibliography, an exhibition documentation, photographic reproductions and research on persons in his environment, etc. The archival holdings owned by the museum were compiled for the first time in 1998 by Isabel Schulz and Marc Wachsmann for the above mentioned museum's catalogue. It contains 254 catalogue numbers, whereby the documentary photographs were not taken into consideration at that time. Until 2010, new acquisitions were inventoried by Karin Orchard and subsequently by Isabel Schulz. The data bank now numbers 795 data sets from the genre "sources" in the possession of the Sprengel Museum Hannover, including 204 manuscripts and 59 letters by Kurt Schwitters in addition to 225 documentary photographs (not counting work reproductions). More than 200 of them are published in the 'Collection online' on the museum's homepage.

The holdings of the Kurt and Ernst Schwitters Foundation were inventoried on its behalf largely by Helmer Smidt between 2006 and 2012, afterwards by Isabel Schulz. Only a part of varied materials, mostly printed matter from the exile time or such holdings as the music literature or sound recordings have not yet been registered individually, but in lists instead (see appendix). The data bank lists 4,185 data sets from the genre "Sources" as in the possession of the foundation (over 2,000 of them can be found in the 'Collection online'), whereby it must be taken into consideration that this number is not identical with the number of concrete documents because all of the letters from and to Kurt Schwitters, all of his texts as well as the documentary photographs were individually registered. It is possible, for example, that they are found on mutual text media or within one and the same album. The number of documents amounts to approximately 3,000 items encompassing circa 10,000 pages, among them 611 manuscripts (circa 2,000 pages) and 1,724 letters written by Kurt Schwitters in addition to 356 documentary photographs (without work reproductions).

The depth of the registering of the archive material dealing with Kurt Schwitters differs depending on the type of document and is a work in progress. In terms of content, the letters are the items that have been most fully keyworded (see list in appendix). Involved parties, i.e. the persons mentioned in the letters or portrayed in the photographs, are recorded individually and the link between related archive material, for example different versions of the same text or various prints of the same photograph, has been provided. Nearly all of the holdings inventoried in the data bank are reproduced digitally.

Ernst Schwitters's photo archive was edited by Olav Løkke on behalf of the foundation from 2003 to 2013 and recorded in part in the data bank (emphasis has been placed on the early b/w photographs from the 1920s and 1930s, especially on the exhibition prints, in addition to the 35mm slides from the 1950s and 1960s). Although the artist photographs are not archive material, they are nevertheless registered in the present finding aid in order to provide a complete representation of Ernst Schwitters's archive. Ernst Schwitters's papers and documents were additionally edited by Helmer Smidt and Isabel Schulz and listed summarily. The relocation and new packaging of the photographic works was completed in 202. In 2023, individual b/w prints by Ernst Schwitters and press articles on his activities, as well as personal documents of the family, in particular of Lola Schwitters, née Mehrgut and her family, came to the SMH from the personal estate of Ernst Schwitters, which was held by his son Bengt. Note: Individual papers and documents by and about Kurt Schwitters can likewise be found in other departments of the Sprengel Museum Hannover, for example the estate Robert Michel and Ella Bergmann-Michel or among the papers of Alexander Dorner in the library. They are easy to find as they have been included in the data bank of the Kurt Schwitters Archive, but are not in the present finding aid.

Biographical Notes

Kurt Schwitters

Kurt Schwitters (1887–1948) is one of the world's most important proponents of avant-garde art and literature in Germany during the interwar period. Born in Hannover on 20 June 1887, he first studied at the Kunstgewerbeschule there and then from 1909 to 1914 at the Akademie der Künste in Dresden. He has been represented in exhibitions since 1911 (at first with naturalistic paintings). 1918 marks the birth of "Merz," his most personal and original contribution to contemporary art during these revolutionary years. From then on, Schwitters summarised his artistic activities, not least in order to distinguish it from Dada, under the term "Merz" (a fragment of the word "Commerz"): He created Merz poems like An Anna Blume, Merz drawings (collages), Merz pictures (assemblages) and Merz sculptures in addition to the Merzbau (Merz Construction), an accessible installation encompassing several rooms that he began working on in 1923. He regularly published texts in the periodical Der Sturm and exhibited in Herwarth Walden's Berlin gallery of the same name. After 1923 he issued his own series of publications, the periodical Merz. Alongside numerous solo and group exhibitions throughout Europe he also regularly organised "Merzabende," evening events in which he recited his texts and such sound poems as the Ursonate. He founded the "MERZ-Werbezentrale" (Advertising Agency) in 1924 and increasingly worked as a typographer.

Schwitters was in close contact to numerous international avant-garde artists (including Jean Arp, Raoul Hausmann, Hannah Höch, Nelly and Theo van Doesburg, El Lissitzky) as well as in the circle of "Der Sturm" and the Berlin Dadaists, the artists of the Dutch "De Stijl" movement and the Constructivist International. He was a co-founder of the artists associations "die abstrakten hannover" and "ring neuer werbegestalter", a member of the "Deutscher Werkbund" as well as such Parisian groups from the 1930s as "Cercle et Carré" and "Abstraction-Création".

Schwitters had regularly visited Norway since 1932; its nature providing an opportunity for withdrawal and regeneration in politically uncertain times. He followed his son Ernst to Oslo when the latter fled there in late 1936. Because of the political developments, he did not return to Germany, where his works held in public collections were destroyed and defamed as "degenerate" since 1933. He increasingly produced naturalistic works while in exile, particularly landscapes and portraits. He was not only able to earn a living with them but they also represent a group of works produced all his life parallel to the abstract oeuvre.

In 1940 he fled to England, first living in internment camps, later in London and after 1945 in Ambleside. Both in Oslo as well as in the Lake District, Schwitters, already several ill, began working on a new Merz Construction with the financial support of the Museum of Modern Art, New York. Forgotten by the art world, Kurt Schwitters died of heart failure in Kendal on 8 January 1948.

Ernst Schwitters

Ernst Schwitters (1918–1996) was regarded in the 1950s as one of Norway's leading photographers, pioneering the media's emancipation as a means of artistic expression there. Born in Hannover on 16 November 1918 and raised there as the son of "Merz" artist Kurt Schwitters in the environment of the international avant-garde, he was familiar with modernism's ideas and experimental processes from an early age. He thus learned the photogram technique from Man Ray in his parent's home from Man Ray in 1929. He freed himself early from scholastic constraints and remained an autodidact. His explorations of New Objectivity photography in the 1920s had a decisive influence on his work. He had already participated in international group exhibitions as an adolescent, for example the 1933 "Deuxième exposition internationale de la photographie et du cinéma" in Brussels. He was impressed on his travels there since 1929 with the emptiness and solitude of the Norwegian landscape. When he fled from the Nazis in late 1936, he chose to go into exile in his adopted country of Norway. He worked as a photographer and commercial artist there, marrying the Norwegian Esther Guhldal in 1939 (divorce 1944). In advance of the 1940 German invasion he fled to England, working until 1945 in London for the Ministry of Propaganda of the Norwegian exile government and became a member of the Royal Photographic Society (RPS) in 1942. He took his first colour photographs one year later.

He returned to Oslo when the war ended, assuming Norwegian citizenship. In November 1945 he married Lola Mehrgut, a German Jew who had flown from Hamburg to London. On behalf of the magazine Aktuell, he documented Vidkun Quisling's trial for high treason as the sole accredited photographer in Norway. In 1946 he became a member of the Oslo Kamera Klubb (OKK) and worked until 1948 for the Norwegian NTB press agency. His son Bengt was born in 1947. Working as a freelance photographer from 1948 to 1963 and was highly acclaimed, receiving such awards as the gold medal of the Norwegian Society for Photography in 1951 and 1955.

In the 1960s he increasingly dedicated himself to administrating his father's estate and restricted his own work as a photographer considerably. He produced extensive series of slides on long voyages during the 1970s and 1980s. He suffered a stroke in 1993 from which he never fully recovered and died on 17 December 1996 in Oslo.

The significance of Ernst Schwitters's work, which is still largely unknown internationally, rest particularly in its intermediary role between the avant-garde approaches of the pre-war period and Norway's art and photography scene after 1945. His work was the consequence of a personal combination of New Objectivity and subjective poetic expression. The photographs offer unique insights into Norway's nature and cultural life from these years. As a photographer, he is characterised by a pronounced sense of composition, coupled with the economic employment of colour. His works are obliged to the aesthetics of the 1920s and are yet unmistakably linked to the time and place in which they were made.

APPENDIX

Lists of the Kurt Schwitters collection

To I.1.1 Manuscripts by Kurt Schwitters

(as of April 2011)

List arranged alphabetically according to title: Titles without brackets derive from KS, spelling follows the original; titles in brackets followed by 3 full stops (“...”) are working titles corresponding to the opening of the text; titles in round brackets correspond to the titles assigned by Friedhelm Lach or Ernst Schwitters, not original titles.

The numbers in square brackets serve to differentiate between varying manuscripts with the same title.

Variants, translations or common text media are indicated in the column on the right (references location)
